

FELLED IN A FIGHT

A Young Boy Brutally Beaten
Tuesday Night

BY A PROFESSIONAL FIGHTER

Edgar Brown Lies in a Stupefied Condition After a Blow From Alfred Taylor, Given in a Prize Fight.A prize fight that may result in the death of one of the principals was held in the old Haymarket building on Canal street last Tuesday night.Edgar Brown was knocked out by Alfred Taylor, a colored porter in the Bridge Street house barber shop, and has not yet recovered consciousness.The fight was held in the rooms of the Ottawa Athletic club. The club has been holding weekly sparring exhibitions for the past two years, but the members disclaim any responsibility for the scrap Tuesday night. They say the fight was engineered by Fred Ingalls, a barber who works in the Bridge Street house shop. F. Pomeroy and C. Ellet, two members of the club, stated that the club received $6 for the use of the hall and that only a few of its members were present at the fight.Brown, lives with his stepfather, George Wright, at No. 476 North Front street. He is only 17 years old, but was considered the "best man" of his age on the west side. Taylor is only 19, but claims to have fought three times in the ring.A Brutal Exhibition.
About thirty-five spectators were present. An admission fee of $1 was charged and the boys fought for the gate money. Brown, weighed in at 130 pounds and Taylor at 115.Brown was accosted by Jacob Moll, Jr., of No. 75 West Leonard street. Ford Ingalls looked after his colored protégé.
Ingalls was master of ceremonies and Jack Edmunds, Jr., held the watch.
Time was called at 10:30.Brown was badly punished in the first two rounds. Taylor's right finding his face and stomach freely. In the third Taylor's right landed with terrific force on Brown's chin and the boy dropped as if dead, his head striking against the floor. Brown lay there motionless and somebody shouted that he was dead.
The sports hustled for the stairway and left the injured man's friends to care for him. One of the gang ran to the Ohio house and the bartender telephoned to Dr. Kelly. When the doctor arrived he was escorted to the hall and made a hasty examination of the young man's wounds. He wished to call an ambulance, but the crowd protested. A hack was procured and Brown taken to his parents' residence.

A Contusion of the Brain.

Dr. Kelly was summoned, but he and Dr. Apple were unable to restore the injured boy to consciousness. There is a contusion of the brain and Dr. Kelly fears that the skull is fractured. Brown's condition has not changed since he fell to the floor. His eyes are set, the lower left side is paralyzed and the patient has not moved since he was placed on the bed. His pulse is about 90 and his respiration slow. Dr. Apple says he manifests all the symptoms of contusion of the brain, except vomiting, but that his condition is so weak that the muscles of his stomach cannot act. The doctors fear that in case he recovers consciousness an abscess may form in the brain or inflammation set in. In either case Brown's chances for recovery are small.Brown's body is frightfully bruised from his head to his abdomen. His lips are cut and swollen, his eyes blackened and his nose pummeled out of shape.
His stomach and chest are black and blue with bruises. His chest looks as if somebody had struck him repeatedly with a coupling pin and then drawn the cable iron across the surface of his quivering skin.George Wright, the stepfather of the boy, is a German by birth and a native of the city, and it is alleged that he knew all about the preparations for the fight. A hiker in the Bridge Street house shop stated yesterday that he was watching him a few days before and winking remarked: "The boys both seem to have a head on their heads. One of them will be able to wear a snail's hat after the scrap."Mrs. Wright declared yesterday that she knew nothing about the fight until her son was brought home unconscious.
She said he did not say anything about it, and if he had she should have notified the police.Taylor slipped out yesterday morning, but was caught at Hastings and brought back on a warrant charging drunkenly assault. Moll and Edmunds were arrested by the police, but were afterwards released. The sports were thoroughly frightened yesterday, and nobody would be found who would admit that he was a spectator at the scrap.At 11 o'clock last night Brown was still unconscious. He had had two or three semi-conscious intervals, and Dr.
Kelly still had hopes for his recovery.

Taylor's Story of the Fight.

Taylor was brought to the jail from Hastings shortly after 11 o'clock last night. To a reporter for the Herald Taylor said that he was hired for a "sparring match" by Fred Ingalls, a young colored barber who formerly worked in the Bridge Street house shop, but was recently discharged. His boss advised him to keep out of it, and I wished the Lord I had, said Arthur.
Ingalls and he went to the Haymarket building together and found Ed Tapp, Brown's brother, and Guy Bradford, an employee of the Leonard Refrigerator works, who was sort of master of ceremonies. There were about twenty others present, but he knew none of them except "Tapp," a Bridge Street house boy."We had fought three rounds," said Taylor, "and he had me pretty well winded. We were both getting pretty tired and I wanted to quit and so did he, but our backers were bound to make us fight it out, so we went to the fourth round. I guess I struck him in the chinor the mouth. I didn't know I hit him hard. Didn't mean to. It was a two-hour fight and we had on sixounce gloves. They told me it was only a sparring match all the time." After the trouble Taylor went to his room over Fitzpatrick's saloon on Kent street, and yesterday morning early went to his work in the hotel, where he was told the detectives had been looking for him, so he took Ingalls' advice and went to the Union depot in a hack and bought a ticket for Marshall, where he has relatives. He got $15 for the fight, and the winner was to have got the net receipts.SUNDAY SCHOOL WORKERS

DROWNED IN THE SWAMP.

Cornelius Vogel Meets Death While Skating Near Butterworth Avenue.Cornelius Vogel, 12 years old, son of Peter Vogel of No. 322 Butterworth avenue, a watchman for DeGraaf, Vrieling & Co., met death yesterday afternoon while skating with playmates in a swamp in Turner's addition on Butterworth street. About 1 o'clock, with his brother Albert, aged 10 years, and Sabra Tokema, a playmate, he was skating on the ice. It was frail and gave way under Cornelius, who was a short distance from the other boys. The water at that point was only about four and a half feet deep. He cried for help and tried to climb upon the edge of the crumbling ice, but it would not bear his weight and he fell back into the icy water.The little boys were powerless to render aid and to their perishing playmate, and it fully half an hour before his body was recovered by others. William Oldenburg, a near neighbor to the Vogels, ran to the boy's rescue, but the ice was so brittle that it would not hold him. The little fellow had become so numbed that he was then unable to stand alone, and Oldenburg was nearly frozen. He could no longer hold the boy and young Vogel fell to the bottom.
The boy's father arrived about that time with a boat, but his boy was lying dead on the bottom of the swamp.He took Oldenburg, who was nearly frozen, to the land, and started through the thick covering of ice for the shore.
The police department was notified and the ambulance and tackle was sent.
Oldenburg was carried on a stretcher to the residence of his sister, Mrs. Lane, at the corner of Park and South Lane avenues. It was thought he would discover, capture and Dr. Husken was summoned. He was in an unconscious condition, but was finally resuscitated, and it is thought he will recover. The body of the boy was removed by the police department and turned over to his parents.

his room over No. 22 Pearl street last evening at 7:30. "Grandpa Sikes," as he was familiarly known, about the hotel for the last fifteen years, was born in Oregon, N. Y., December 3, 1804, makinghim 87 years old at the time of his death. He lived in this city as a common laborer about forty years ago, and after he became too feeble for hard work he gained a livelihood by selling fruit and candies on the street corners and around the hotels. For the last few years he has been unable to work and spent much of his time at the Salvation Army barracks on Pearl street. He lived with his daughter, Mrs. Stone, where he died. He leaves four daughters, Mrs. Emma Shaw of Iowa, Mrs.
Kosa Spencer, Mrs. May Thurston and
